

Air and Aviation Law | PhD & Masters Programmes

The University of Cape Town is now inviting applications for admission to the Faculty of Law's PhD and Master's Programmes with a focus on Air and Aviation Law. These degrees are by research and dissertation only (no course work).

This is an exciting new area for the Faculty, and is led by Distinguished Professor Salazar who recently authored Air Law (2019) – a book focused on the laws of air and aviation in South Africa, the first book of its kind on this particular legal focus, and a publication hailed as of great value to the aviation community (more information on this publication can be found at <https://amzn.to/3g8anxq>).

The programme has already attracted top aviation executives.

This is a unique opportunity for pilots or aviation administrators to gain an advanced degree from Africa's top-ranking institution and from an internationally renowned Law Faculty.

Students do NOT need to hold a law degree to enrol for a Masters programme. For a PhD, however, a LLM (Masters in Law) is recommended - but not compulsory.

For more information contact Ms Patricia Phillips on patricia.phillips@uct.ac.za or Distinguished Prof Philippe-Joseph Salazar on philippe.salazar@uct.ac.za.

